Raymond's practice focuses on civil litigation, with an emphasis on toxic tort, products liability, premises liability, personal injury and commercial litigation. He has also represented employers in all aspects of labor and employment law, including employment discrimination litigation and wrongful discharge litigation.

Raymond has handled defending more than two hundred toxic tort cases involving products liability, premises liability and wrongful death claims for alleged exposure to alleged toxic substances, including asbestos, silica and benzene, for major oil companies, chemical companies, boiler manufacturers and contractors.

Raymond's commercial litigation experience has involved fraudulent conveyances, the "deepening insolvency" doctrine, bankruptcy-related litigation, contracts, commercial torts and covenants-not-to-compete.
